the Mansfields, Father and Little Son, Enjoyed Themselves.

"Gibbs," said Richard Mansfield, the great actor, to his little son out walking one day, "why are you sliding your feet?"

"I'm a steam engine," replied the little fellow.

"Then you need coal." And his father shoveled imaginary coal into the boy's pockets with an imaginary shovel until they were make believe

The engine went full steam ahead. But soon Mansfield came upon him at a dead standstill. What's this -- something broken? With perfect seriousness, "Yes,

After a careful examination of fingers, neck and elbows: "Of This engine needs oiling." Forthwith his cane became a long spouted oil can and poked all over the engine, which directly flew off at lightning speed, as, of course, any well lubricated engine would. Next day this conversation would take place:

"Good morning, Gibbs." "Good morning, sir."

"What are you this morning?" "I'm a sea captain, and my boat has 2,000,000 head of cattle in the hold, which my million of sailors"after an earnest pause-"no, I'm greengrocer this morning, father."

"Oh, well, in that case I want to omplain of the cabbages and artichokes which your man sent me

"The one with the red hair?" "Yes, sir. I think he nibbled the cabbages, and I'm sure he choked the artichokes."

After a concentrated moment to grasp this subtlety: "I'm glad you spoke about it. I felt he was a bad man. I've discharged him already. You know, I want to keep your patronage, Mr. Mansfield. the best customer we have."

"In that case send me a bushel of turnips and a few of your nicest

New ones in this morning." Hands imaginary fruit.

Making pretense of examining imaginary grape fruit: "Much bet ter than last. Two, if you please How much?"

"Two hundred and fifty dollars." Without so much as a glimmer of a smile he passes out make believe payment. "There you are."

"Thank you. Here's your change." Thus make believe entertained them for hours.-Paul Wilstach in Scribner's.

Why should one razor be a treasure and another, made from the same steel at the same time, be only fit for throwing away? This is one of the questions which are difficult to answer. You may buy two razors for the same price, exactly similar in every repect. One will be a useful servant for years, while the other is a constant source of trouble and irritation, acting beautifully one day and eratching and scraping the next.

In the same way one nut will go smoothly on to a bolt and remain there firm; another, exactly the same size, will not go on at all. A third will go on all right and keep coming off. One tool will break the first time it is used, another will last for years and then break suddenly, while a third will be worn quite away by hard work without causing trouble. Why?

It is one of the puzzles to which there would seem to be no satisfacorv answer.

Things Were Safe.

"Are you an engineer?" asked the romantic young lady as she walked up the platform to the locomotive and smiled on the man looking out of the cab window.

"Yes'm," was the curt reply. "You hold the lives of all us passengers in your hand?" "Exactly, miss."

"And you feel the fearful responability?"

"I surely do."

"And you will-will"-

"Just so, miss. I've got a two dollar dog back in the baggage car that I'm taking home, and I shall take the most extraordinary precautions to keep the whole train on the rails and right end up until we reach Chicago."—Chicago News.

He Misunderstood.

"The simplest propositions," said a congressman in a recent address, "must be set out with the utmost care in the wording or misunderstanding, dissent, even anger, may result. Thus as a train was moving forth from a Cincinnati station a man stuck his head far out of the

"'Keep your head in there,' a station attendant shouted in warning, 'or it will be knocked off!'

"'Knocked off!' shouted the passenger. 'Knocked off, eh? Well, it won't be knocked off by anybody the size of you, you bandy legged shrimp!"
